NEWS WORTH SHARING.

Need a rest from all the fests?

Popular culture. Some say festivals like this weekend's Salsa on St. Clair are too crowded

Salsa dancers brave sweaty crowds and the risk of getting stabbed in the foot with a stiletto on a regular basis.

But throw sticky weather, lineups and hundreds of thousands of people into the mix, and you've got a recipe for a hot mess of congestion.

From Greek food to jazz, rib-fests and salsa, Toronto offers a host of vibrant summer festivals, but is it possible that they're too popular for their own good?

Some people say large crowds diminish the charm of some of Toronto's summer outdoor offerings. Salsa on St. Clair is gearing up for its ninth year on Saturday and Sunday, when it will close off St. Clair Avenue West from Christie to Winona avenues to make space for Latin live music, food and dancing.

Alejandra Gonzalez is a diehard salsa dancer who hits the dance floor two to three times a week. She said in previous years Salsa on St. Clair has been so crowded, hot and sweaty that she won't be back this year.

"It's just too many people and you can't really have a good time. You can't really move."

Other members of Toronto's salsa community aren't fazed.

"It's supposed to be crowded," says Gustavo Patzan, who organizes salsa parties in the GTA and surrounding area, runs dance troupe Gusto Dance Company and has been performing salsa internationally for seven years.

Last year's crowd was "over a couple hundred thousand," but it's hard to gauge exact numbers, said Marisa Ciarlitto of TLN Telelatino, which hosts the festival along with the City of Toronto and the Hillcrest BIA.

A peek into festival planning at a number of Toronto festivals shows that food stands, stages and event timing are staggered with surgical precision to encourage pedestrian flow.

Howard Lichtman, chief marketing officer of Pilaros Taste of the Danforth, which celebrates Mediterranean food and multicultural entertainment, said the street festival draws between 1.2 and 1.4 million people.

Lichtman points to the tradeoff of free entertainment and food samples.

"The price of popularity is at certain times it's crowded. In part that's the price of admission," said Lichtman.

The festival runs Aug. 9 to 11 and closes a three-kilometre strip of Danforth Avenue from Broadview to Jones avenues.

This year will feature a skating rink and attempts to break two world records: the largest Zorba the Greek dance (10,000 people) and the largest Greek yogurt bowl (1.5 metres tall and 590 kilograms).

No subway talks until council makes decision

Scarborough extension. Glenn Murray demands firm plan from Toronto before committing to change in LRT project

Time for action

"If there's something substantial there, then we'll look at it, and if there isn't — then it'll be a short conversation."

Transportation Minister Glenn Murray, saying that he hopes council's intentions for transit will be made clear at a July 16 meeting

Taking aim at Toronto council's lingering indecision, Transportation Minister Glenn Murray says there won't be any more discussions about a Scarborough subway extension until the city has a consensus.

Murray was peppered with questions at an event on Thursday morning for the planned Union Pearson Express, which he said is proceeding on time and on-budget.

"There are no discussions going on regarding making the LRT into a subway," he said. "We're not currently negotiating a deal with the city of Toronto on this."

He confirmed he had recently talked with TTC chair Karen Stintz about plans for the successor to the obsolete Scarborough rapid-transit system, which, according to a master agreement signed last November, is to be replaced with light rail.

Stintz on Thursday confirmed Murray asked for formal clarification of the city's position on expanding the subway along the SRT route instead. "After all the discussions we have had, I think there's a growing awareness that extending the Bloor-Danforth line to Sheppard is a good transit project," she said.

"The city manager is looking at ways we can finance the increase in cost from an LRT to a subway, and we will be asking for the province to honour their commitment for $1.8 billion."

But Murray was unequivocal: He wants clarity from the city before he will make any commitments, and in the interim, work will continue on the LRT. "It's not just a case of passing a motion at council and saying, 'We've changed minds like we changed our socks,'" he said.

Murray said the LRT budget has in fact been reduced by $400 million to $1.4 billion, and work done so far is on time and on-budget. The province has estimated that switching to a subway would cost $923 million more.

Murray said he hopes all will be made clear at the July 16 council meeting, when city manager Joe Pennachetti will submit his recommendations.

He added also that he wouldn't even entertain the idea of a subway expansion until the city presents plans for a new zoning package that would be needed for new office towers.

Studio owner sees 'beauty in the rubble' of Monday's storm

The caved-in ceiling at Misfit studio. CONTRIBUTED/AMBER JOLIAT

One yoga studio owner has only gratitude after Monday's storm left her King Street loft — where she teaches dance, Pilates and yoga — in pieces.

"To see it destroyed by the weather was devastating. I was in shock and couldn't move," Misfit owner Amber Joliat said.

In her two and a half years at the site, she said the historic building radiated character with its antique doors, window frames and stairs, and her collection of chandeliers.

But when 90 mm of rain fell in just over two hours that afternoon, Joliat was definitely struck. She watched as water began drizzling in from the skylights: "Literally, what it was doing outside, it was doing inside my studio."

The pouring rain caused the ceiling to cave in, which was when she asked everyone inside to brave the storm, since it was safer than standing under a ceiling about to collapse.

That is when 889 Yoga nearby opened up its studio to Joliat. She has been friends with the owners since last year, when she began teaching classes at the studio's Thompson Hotel location.

It was there that the owners of 889 — Emily Ridout and her sister Christine Russell — forged their relationship with Joliat.

The two studios co-existed in separate spaces until Thursday, when they melded their schedules under one roof at the Thompson.

In that sense, it was the perfect storm.

"This is all just going to build a really beautiful and committed community. This is what we've always wanted," Joliat said. "Just seeing the beauty in the rubble."

Astral-city contract hits another snag

20-year deal. Company proposes digital ads to recoup money lost on information pillars

First, badly designed garbage bins; then, poorly thought-out standalone public washrooms.

Now there's not enough room on Toronto's sidewalks for one-third of Astral's planned information pillars, which hold the 1.2-by-1.8-metre ads that were expected to pay for the company's massive street-furniture contract with the city as it rolled out over 20 years.

The reduction in information pillars could mean a loss of $40 million in advertising revenue for Astral. So the company is asking the city for permission to replace its poster ads in bus shelters with more lucrative digital advertising, as well as wrap-around ads, to recoup the money.

Ron Hutchinson, Astral's senior vice-president of real estate, says it's important to note that advertising is confined to the pillars and bus shelters. The program has eliminated advertising on city benches and garbage containers.

"All of that has been removed," he said.

Astral has guaranteed the city will receive a minimum of $429 million over the life of the contract, which is now in its sixth year, as well as the delivery of more than 25,000 pieces of street furniture, including benches, bus shelters and garbage bins. The total contract, including ad revenue and repairs and maintenance, is worth $900 million to the city.

But the same political push-back that had city staff rewriting guidelines for the pillars after complaints that they dominated sidewalks may have sidelined the digital-advertising deal.

Some councillors are concerned that wraparound ads on shelters would compromise the safety of TTC passengers. Others think the digital ads, which will change every eight to 10 seconds, will be dangerously distracting to drivers.

"I think wrapping bus shelters in advertising is unsafe," said Coun. Janet Davis. "All of the research shows the best way to maintain safety is to keep the sides of shelters clear."

Davis also says the city's sign bylaws confine digital advertising to certain areas of the city.

Wanted. Man sought in multiple bank robberies

Police are asking for the public's help in finding a man wanted in connection with six bank robberies in Toronto and Winnipeg over the past few weeks.

They say Corey Richardson, 44, is believed to be somewhere in downtown Toronto, where he is originally from.

But they warn he should be considered armed and dangerous and anyone who sees him should not approach him but call 911.

Four of the robberies were in downtown Toronto and two were in Winnipeg, and police say all six have taken place since June 18.

In the most recent robbery — Wednesday in Toronto — police say the robber handed the teller a note, demanded money and then fled with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Richardson is described as black and about five-foot-six with a medium build. Police say he has a tattoo of Malcolm X on his right upper arm and the word "Kim" with a rose on his right calf.

Shipment. Suspected heroin found at Pearson

Border officials at Pearson airport have seized more than 10 kilograms of suspected heroin stuffed inside a sport bag they say arrived on a flight from Pakistan.

The Canada Border Services Agency says officers spotted a suspicious box on July 2 while checking shipments as they were unloaded from the plane.

They say inside the cardboard box was a blue sports bag holding four small packages carefully wrapped with brown packing tape.

The agency says preliminary testing indicates the substance in the packages is likely heroin.

There's no word yet on any suspects. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coke on board?

An official says the narcotic seizure is the second big drug bust at the airport in the past few weeks. More than 18 kg of suspected cocaine were found last month tucked into a bathroom overhang.

FREAK STORM HITS CITY, TTC HARD

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Monday's weather event tested us all. In the end, we weathered it well.

With practically no notice, the city was caught in a freak and heavy storm that affected virtually every aspect of our operation. The subway lost power in multiple locations, critical infrastructure was damaged, and horrendous road conditions delayed buses and streetcars. For our customers, this made for a long, frustrating ride home.

Our transit control centre team was at the epicentre of our response, working calmly and methodically to evacuate trains that were trapped without power, to provide information, and to arrange bus shuttles at the height of the evening rush hour.

Out in the open, infrastructure crews worked in pouring rain to coax failed equipment back to life. Staff volunteered to stay on late and come in early to kick-start our recovery. On the roads, our bus drivers faced horrendous traffic and understandably frustrated customers in one of the biggest bus-shuttle operations that we have organized in recent years. The west end of our subway was hardest hit with Kipling station and the track to Islington flooded and without power for two days.

Throughout the incident, your safety was our primary concern. Working closely with the City and other agencies, we tried very hard to provide alternative service and to keep you informed. As with any crisis, we will learn from this event to improve, as there is always room for improvement.

I would like to thank you, our customers, for your patience while we restored service, and TTC staff that worked so hard to achieve that objective.

Kipling Station, July 9, 2013

HOW TO NAVIGATE A SUBWAY DELAY

Monday night's heavy rainfall and subsequent flooding is an example of an unpredictable subway disruption. When a subway delay occurs, buses are pulled from other routes to supplement service. However, with rush-hour trains carrying upwards of 1,200 customers every two to three minutes, and buses with a limited capacity of 48, it is difficult to accommodate everyone. While TTC staff do their best to maximize resources, it is important to consider our expansive bus and streetcar network when planning an alternate route. Here are a few tools customers can use to navigate delays:

TTC Trip Planner – Available at www.ttc.ca, the TTC Trip Planner provides customers with subway, bus and streetcar alternatives to their regular route of travel.

Ride Guide – TTC Ride Guides provide a complete listing of TTC routes. Many bus and streetcar lines parallel subway service, acting as useful alternatives to shuttle buses.

TTC eServices – Customers who register an account with TTC eServices have the option of receiving route-specific service notifications, as well as News Releases and Media Advisories.

@TTCnotices – Transit Control staff actively monitor service across the system and provide up-to-the-minute updates on Twitter.

Platform Video Screens – For customers on the system, live updates are displayed on the yellow ticker at the bottom of the screen. Anyone requiring assistance can speak with the station collector.

We liked their early stuff better? Belugas to see another concert

Two Winnipeg artists are on the northernmost edge of Manitoba this summer to organize a concert series that promises to really whale.

Laura Magnusson and Kaoru Ryan Klatt left for Churchill last week with a specially crafted "sculptural sea vessel" — complete with a stage and an underwater speaker system — to stage performances for thousands of beluga whales on the Churchill River estuary.

"We're fostering ties between humans and belugas," explained Magnusson, who's travelled with Klatt to Churchill for the past two summers to sing and talk to whale pods.

"This is the last hurrah."

Walmart denies firing woman over dog rescue

Hot dog. Former employee says she was told she was fired for 'being rude to a customer'

JOE LOFARO
Metro in Ottawa

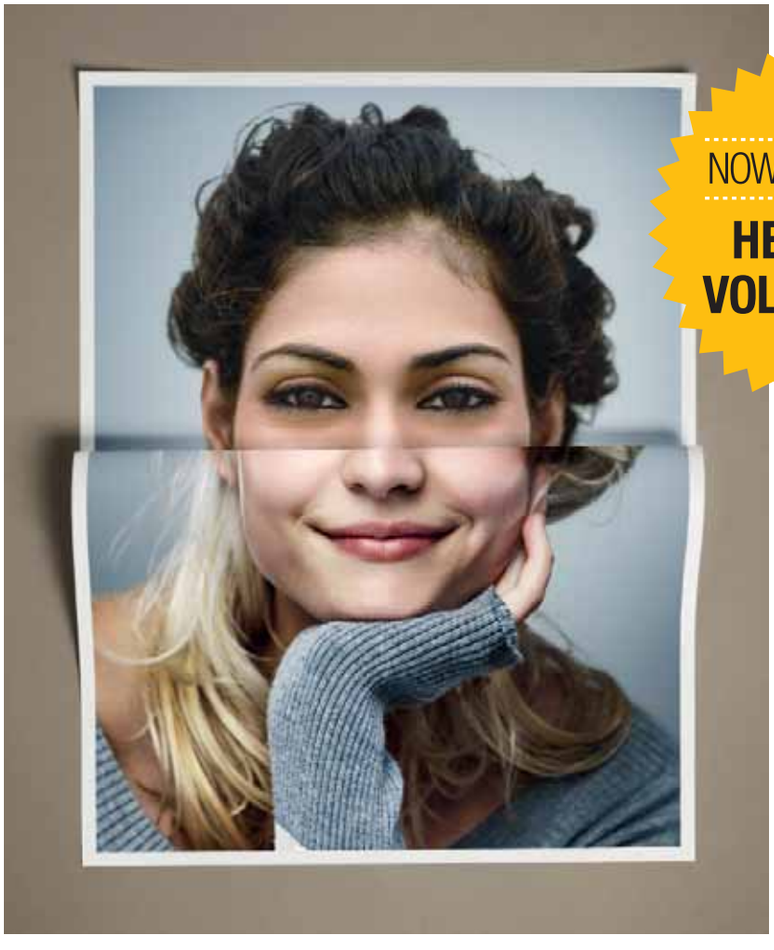
Following an incident where one its employees in Kemptville, Ont. was fired after confronting a customer who left his dog in a car on a hot morning, Walmart Canada says it will install signs in its parking lots across Canada warning shoppers about the dangers of leaving children and pets in hot vehicles.

Carla Cheney with her dog Chico
JOE MORIN/METROLAND NEWS SERVICE

Walmart Canada issued a statement on its Facebook page just before noon Thursday saying that it is major supporter of animal rights and denying the termination was over the employee's move to confront the customer.

"We want you to know that the associate in question was absolutely not let go for trying to help a dog in a locked car. The decision to dismiss an associate is one that we take extremely seriously and must follow a comprehensive process," the statement said. "As per our protocol, the store manager did speak to the customer in question about the dangers of leaving a dog in a hot car."

The former employee, Carla Cheney, a pharmacy technician, said she called police Tuesday when she saw a man leave his dog in a truck in the parking lot. She said the SPCA had advised her to call 911 after a similar incident that happened at the store a week earlier.



MEDICINES COME IN ALL SHAPES AND SIZES
SO DO OUR VOLUNTEERS

Developing new medicines and improving existing ones depends on clinical trials. But these controlled clinical research studies need volunteers.

That's why we're looking for healthy adults who are aged 18 to 60 and want to participate in a clinical research study with an investigational influenza vaccine.

The study consists of 5 outpatient visits (no in-clinic stays) over 8 months and follow-up phone calls.

Eligible subjects will receive up to $2,020 in financial compensation for completing this clinical study.

Oath to the Queen of Canada 'repulsive'

Citizenship. Would-be Canadians challenge requirement to pledge allegiance to Elizabeth

Forcing would-be Canadians to pledge allegiance to the Queen before they can become citizens is discriminatory and a violation of their rights, three permanent residents are set to argue in court on Friday.

The Citizenship Act requires applicants for citizenship to swear or affirm they will be "faithful and bear true allegiance to Queen Elizabeth the Second, Queen of Canada, her heirs and successors."

The requirement "effectively bars" the applicants from enjoying citizenship rights such as voting or obtaining a Canadian passport given their constitutionally protected beliefs, their application to Ontario Superior Court states.

Michael McAteer, one of three disgruntled would-be citizens. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the applicants, Michael McAteer, says his father was persecuted in Ireland for supporting Irish independence.

"Taking an oath of allegiance to a hereditary monarch who lives abroad would violate my conscience," McAteer says.

Simone Topey says swearing allegiance to the Queen — whom Rastafarians regard as the "head of Babylon" — would violate her beliefs.

Dror Bar-Natan maintains the Queen is a symbol of entrenched privilege and taking the oath would be "repulsive."

For its part, the federal government argues that the three are in Canada voluntarily, and their political and religious views enjoy constitutional protections.

That they cannot have the "convenience" of a Canadian passport or the right to vote is a small price to pay for adhering to their principles.

"It is not constitutionally inconsistent that the applicants who find Canada's foundational democratic political structure to be 'repugnant,' at least in parts, are not accorded the right to vote within that political system," it states.

"The inability to enjoy the benefits of citizenship ... are amongst the costs reasonably borne by individuals whose personal beliefs run counter to Canada's foundational heritage." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Drug trade. Canadian crooks deal directly with Mexican mobsters: RCMP

Canadian organized-crime groups have forged links with Mexican outlaws in an attempt to secure a direct supply of cocaine and increase their profits by eliminating the middleman, the RCMP says.

An internal analysis by the Mounties notes that since 2008 at least 10 Canadians have been shot or killed in Mexico under circumstances suggesting involvement with local criminal elements.

Some were known to be active in drug trafficking in Canada and all had extensive criminal backgrounds, the RCMP analysis says.

A copy of the May 2012 assessment — heavily censored — was released under the Access to Information Act.

The murder in Mexico of several Canadians with criminal connections may signal that Canadian disputes and retaliatory actions are making their way south — contrary to the popular perception that drug-cartel frictions are migrating north, the RCMP's companion report says. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pot petition goes official in B.C.

An activist in B.C. has been granted approval to launch an official petition in an effort to decriminalize pot.

Elections BC will issue the petition on Sept. 9, after which Dana Larsen has 90 days to get the signatures of 10 per cent of voters in each of B.C.'s ridings.

If he achieves that, a legislature committee could choose to either send the matter to the legislature for a vote or call a referendum. THE CANADIAN PRESS

People comfort each other outside an emergency shelter in Lac-Mégantic, Que., on Thursday. Some locals have fond recollections of their dealings with the train driver at the centre of the investigation. JACQUES BOISSINOT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Train engineer a hero or criminal?

Lac-Mégantic disaster. Man hailed for valiant actions now suspended and under suspicion

His face gripped with terror, the train driver sprang out of bed at the inn where he'd retired for the night and raced to the scene of an impending catastrophe.

Residents of Lac-Mégantic, Que., painted a portrait Thursday of the friendly railman who chatted with locals during his regular stopovers in town.

An employee at the inn says she thinks she was looking into his eyes the instant he realized his unmanned, crude-oil-filled train had just slammed into the downtown core.

The train driver, Tom Harding, now finds himself at the centre of the investigation into a derailment disaster now feared to have killed 50 people.

His boss has said he could face criminal charges.

The chairman of the rail company has suspended Harding without pay amid concerns that he might not have properly applied the brakes on the tanker train.

The company had initially described Harding as a hero for apparently rushing to the scene where he managed to pull some of the explosive rail cars away from the flames.

A taxi driver met Harding on Friday night at the spot where he parked the train before it roared into town. He said his regular customer seemed fine.

However, Andre Turcotte did say that the train appeared to be belching out more smoke than usual, so much so that he recalled oil droplets from the exhaust landing on his car.

He said he asked Harding twice about the smoke. Turcotte said his client calmly responded that he had followed company directives to deal with it. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Leave him alone

"I imagine it's not his fault. In the meantime, he needs support — he doesn't need harassment.... And if it's his fault, listen, he will pay for it, for sure."

Taxi driver Andre Turcotte, who has transported engineer Tom Harding from the train to the inn once or twice a week for the past four months.

Updates

Locals head home as first victim named

Police released the first name of a victim on Thursday: 93-year-old Elianne Parenteau. Most of the bodies have not been found or identified.

Much of the local anger has been directed at the company, Montreal, Maine & Atlantic Railway.

Quebec Premier Pauline Marois called MMA's handling of the crisis "deplorable." The local mayor says she's angry at the company boss for cancelling a meeting with her.

Another 600 Lac-Mégantic residents are being allowed home. Quebec civil security spokeswoman Christine Savard said that means only about 200 people of 2,000 who were forced out won't be back home after today.

Ottawa. Top court to hear cellphone privacy case

The Supreme Court of Canada is taking on the question of whether police can access information on a cellphone that isn't protected by a password.

The court has agreed to hear an appeal from Kevin Fearon, who was arrested after an armed robbery in Toronto in 2009.

Police obtained photos of a gun and cash, as well as a text message about jewelry, after taking a closer look at Fearon's phone, which was unlocked. After he was convicted, Fearon appealed, arguing police breached his rights by examining the phone after his arrest.

The Ontario Court of Appeal said it was all right for the police to look through the phone in a cursory fashion to see if there was evidence relevant to the crime, but after that they should have stopped to get a search warrant.

Had the phone been password-protected or otherwise locked to anyone other than its owner, "it would not have been appropriate" to look through the phone without a search warrant.

The appeal judges referred to a decision in a murder case in which the judge did not allow evidence from a personal electronic device because it "functioned as a mini-computer," which has a high expectation of privacy. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sheer pants may be due to incorrect size: Lululemon

Retailer Lululemon says customers could still be sporting see-through Luon yoga pants because they're buying sizes that are too small for them.

The Vancouver-based company said there are still "a few negative comments" circulating online from shoppers whom it believes are buying the wrong size.

The problem may be that "guests don't have the benefit of doing an in-store fit session with one of our educators to make sure the fit is right for them," the company said in a Frequently Asked Questions section of its website.

"The majority of feedback about the return of our black Luon bottoms has been positive," it noted.

Lululemon says it has made "big changes" to its product development process since the sheer pants first grabbed attention in March. THE CANADIAN PRESS

1 Pocketful o' change. Stephen Harper's cabinet shuffle reminds me of a time when you could take a $50 bill and change it into a stack of $1 and $2 bills so that you felt a little bit richer. Even though you still only had $50.

2 Cool cats. Last December, a man in Windsor, Ont., was found with 155 dead cats in his freezer. This week, Jerry Miernecki pleaded guilty and was banned from owning more than one animal, which must be spayed or neutered. And one year probation, because they'll want to keep an eye out for odd behaviour.

3 Miseducation. Remember Lauryn Hill? The reclusive Fugees star left showbiz in 2000 due to the overwhelming pressure, but collected over $1.5 million US in royalties between 2005 and 2007 for which she failed to file income tax. Hill is serving a three-month prison sentence, followed by 90 days of house arrest concurrent with one-year parole. And, on top of that, all of her pets must be spayed or neutered.

4 Ice, ice baby. Homegrown cutie, Elisha Cuthbert, married Maple Leafs' captain Dion Phaneuf this week. Women across the country talked and tweeted about how beautiful she looked in her dress, while male hockey fans imagined the opposite.

5 Go West. Following Armenian religious tradition, Kim Kardashian is keeping herself and Baby North at home for 40 days, or as she puts it, half a marriage-length.

6 Boo who? Honey Boo Boo's back. Regular and scented. Scratch and sniff cards courtesy of People magazine and US Weekly let viewers follow their noses from pageant to trailer park. Hey, say what you like but TLC understands marketing to the lowest common denominator. Still, what I've seen provides a pretty good sense of what the show smells like already.

7 King's crown. This week in 1954, a 19-year-old employee of The Crown Electric Company in Memphis, Tenn., gave his notice after signing a contract with Sun Records. Elvis had previously been told by local auditioners to keep his day job. He would arguably become the most influential cultural icon of the 20th century. And yet, right now there are young readers saying, "Elvis who?"

8 Sultans of spin. Are you the best DJ in town? How about the country? If you said, "Hells Yeah!", go to redbullthre3style.com to upload your set by July 27. 9 Unsilent moment. Last year, Canadian indie band The Mark Inside gathered at the Toronto loft of vocalist/lyricist Chris Levoir for the indefinite task of composing and recording their third album. Forces aligned creating the sense, personally and artistically, that their most meaningful work had taken shape. Last month, that inspired journey turned bittersweet as the release of Dark Hearts Can Radiate White Light, eerily coincided with Levoir's unexpected death. Toronto team takes international prize

Two Toronto engineers have just finished setting up their prize-winning helicopter that is powered by Todd Reichert's powerful legs pedalling a bicycle.

Since 1980, a challenge to engineers across the world — to build a human-powered helicopter, capable of sustaining three metres of flight for 60 seconds — had remained unclaimed.

Teams of engineers from Japan to the U.S. came close, but not close enough. Only Reichert's team has fulfilled the seemingly impossible feat, earning it a $250,000 prize Thursday. The award-winning flight took place in June, after 18 months for the University of Toronto alumni to build and fine tune the project. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

- It measures nearly 47 metres across, but is also surprisingly light for its size, at just 54 kilograms.
- The lightweight nature of the frame, made largely of carbon fibre tubes that connect four rotors to a central bike, is a necessity.

Crowdfunding site Kickstarter is making its way across the border later this summer — but just 'cause us Canucks can't start our own funding projects yet, doesn't mean we can't contribute. Since Kickstarter is generally home to the nerdy entrepreneur, we sorted through what new tech they're coming up with. (So you don't have to. You're welcome.)

Plug:
With files stored all over the place from the cloud to your smartphone to your laptop, plug aims to centralize all your info — the brain of your personal info operation if you will. $69 on Kickstarter, $150 retail once it's made.

Wrist Charge:
No more missed texts from dead phones. No more tangled wires. Wrist Charge looks like one of the slash bracelets from the 90s (these ones aren't fluorescent, don't worry) and uses any USB port. $15 on Kickstarter, $29.99 retail.

C.24 Music Keyboard for iPad:
You might not need your iPad to turn into a keyboard, but you might as well. This keyboard acts as a case for the iPad and with the flip of a lever it turns into a piano keyboard. $99 on Kickstarter.

She may want to reacquaint herself with the actual myth.

Synopsis

Grown Ups 2 picks up where the last movie left off. Lenny (Adam Sandler in his first ever sequel) has relocated his wife (Salma Hayek) and kids back to his hometown to be closer to friends and family. It's the last day of school, and as the kids are packing up their books, their fathers (Kevin James, Chris Rock, David Spade) grapple with growing up, growing old and a gang of frat boys (lead by Twilight's Taylor Lautner) who think the four old friends are way over the hill.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Adam Sandler's comedy Grown Ups 2 opens this weekend. HANDOUT

It's more number two than it is number one

New movie. In the sequel to Grown Ups, the comedy doesn't grow into anything and remains a series of juvenile jokes and potty humour

Richard: Mark, the old saying, "They got bigger, but they didn't grow up," perfectly applies to this new Sandler and Company movie. It's 90 minutes of middle-aged men, urination gags (too many to count) and cleavage shots. So while the actors may have matured (chronologically at least) the jokes haven't. Question is: is it funny? I didn't really think so, although I have to say Shaquille O'Neal's big-guy-Andre-the-Giant shtick made me laugh. You?

Mark: No, I didn't laugh. But let's examine the inventory. Chris Rock may be the funniest stand-up working today, but as a movie star, he's never done anything much worthwhile.

David Spade: Tommy Boy was a long time ago.

Sandler: Well, I only find him funny when he's trying to be serious.

There is only one movie genius here — I'm not kidding — and it's Kevin James. He's the only one of the bunch that can convincingly play a regular guy and not come off like a slumming millionaire. And even then, not in this turkey.

Also you might have to wonder about any sequel that Rob Schneider passes on.

RC: I wondered where Schneider's character was. I guess some friendships don't last forever. I can't say I didn't laugh at all.

James' deadpan dumb kid who can't add or spell is a pretty funny running gag but for a movie about growing up, it was all so juvenile. I didn't expect a searing meditation on aging but I did think they might touch on the fact that they were growing old with more smarts than lines like, "I used to buy 10 cases of beer for my parties, now I get 10 cases of juice boxes."

MB: A good line. I snorted in recognition. And I grudgingly laughed a bit at a few sight gags, like the exploding life raft and some of the '80s outfits at the party finale. But generally, the humour aims too low. But I liked it — if I can use the word — more than the first one. At least it had some nice callbacks and weird twists of coincidence. And it had a lazy summer quality about it, probably the result of lazy screenwriting, acting and direction.

RC: I like silly movies, I just wish it was silly and about something other than a moose urinating on Sandler's unsuspecting family, and by extension, the audience.

MB: We should all feel lucky. In the first draft of the script, it was the other way around.

Science Fiction

Pacific Rim

Director. Guillermo del Toro

Stars. Charlie Hunnam, Idris Elba, Rinko Kikuchi

Director Guillermo del Toro has made an end-of-the-world scenario fun. In Pacific Rim the planet is threatened by Kaijus, colossal beasts with an appetite for destruction. Giant robots called Jaegers, operated by pilots like Raleigh Becket (Charlie "Sons of Anarchy" Hunnam) are the last hope to fight the beasts and save the world. Add to that Ron Perlman in a colourful cameo, huge-scale martial arts and Roger Corman-esque science theories and you'll have a geek freak-out. RICHARD CROUSE

Thriller

Byzantium

Director. Neil Jordan

Stars. Gemma Arterton, Saoirse Ronan

Make no mistake, director Neil Jordan's hypnotic Byzantium is indeed a towering, blood spattered and feverishly erotic work of high art. In it, Gemma Arterton and Saoirse Ronan star as lost girls, mother and daughter vampires who hole up in the titular seaside hotel running afoul of an ancient bloodsucking sect. Only a dip into convention at the climax hampers this beautifully shot film; otherwise it's a must-see. CHRIS ALEXANDER

Comedy

Syrup

Director. Aram Rappaport

Stars. Shiloh Fernandez, Amber Heard

●●○○○

A satirical comedy about a marketing-school-drop-out (Shiloh Fernandez) who pitches a risqué energy drink to a big-name soda company — via its sexiest and most unscrupulous young executive (Amber Heard). Syrup wants to be scathing but its claws aren't quite sharp enough. The script's reminders that advertising is all about image are about a half-century too late. And while it conjures up a credibly nasty tone, it feels like the film is trying too hard. ADAM NAYMAN

Drama

Diaz — Don't Clean Up This Blood

Director. Daniele Vicari

Stars. Claudio Santamaria, Jennifer Ulrich

Based on a true story, Diaz focuses its lens on a savage police raid on holed-up protestors during the G8 summit in 2001. Capturing the sheer tragedy of the events, filmmaker Daniele Vicari's take does not relent — pummelling the audience as badly with cinematic violence as the Italian cops destroy the demonstrators. It may be an important film but at over two hours, Vicari's point will still feel unnecessarily beaten into your brain. STEVE GOW

Drama

Fondi '91

Director. Dev Khanna

Stars. Raymond Ablack, Mylène St-Sauveur

In Dev Khanna's coming-of-age story, tensions among a New Jersey high school soccer team come to a head during a two-week tournament in Fondi, Italy. When Anil (Raymond Ablack), a brooding outsider teased relentlessly for his Indian background, fails to intervene during a troubling incident between his teammate and a local girl, all sense of right and wrong is thrown into question as he tries to live with the brutal consequences. MANORI RAVINDRAN

Man! I feel like a woman

"It was at that moment I had an epiphany, and I went home and started crying. Talking to my wife, I said, 'I have to make this picture,' and she said, 'Why?' And I said, 'Because I think I am an interesting woman when I look at myself on screen. And I know that if I met myself at a party, I would never talk to that character because she doesn't fulfil physically the demands that we're brought up to think women have to have in order to ask them out."

Dustin Hoffman, in a candid interview with the American Film Institute about his role in the 1982 film Tootsie.

Conjuring up old-school horror

Patrick Wilson. The actor chats with Metro about his latest horror flick, which was a throwback to the '70s

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

When it comes to discussing contemporary horror movies, "restraint" isn't usually a word that comes up too often.

But it's one that actor Patrick Wilson keeps coming back to when describing how director James Wan (Saw, Insidious) approached The Conjuring, based on a case file by real-life paranormal investigators Ed Warren (Wilson) and Lorraine Warren (Vera Farmiga).

The irony doesn't escape Wilson that Wan is at least partially responsible for the current state of horror, but against that backdrop, The Conjuring — presented as if it were released during its early 1970s setting — is a throwback in the best possible way.

This movie is seriously terrifying.

Yeah, the movie's no joke. I watched it again last night, and my friend who was with me — who had also seen it with me before — jumped more this time than he did the other time. I kept looking over at him like, "But you know what's coming." I would even look at him right before something happened, and he would look at me like, "I know," and then he'd look back at the screen and he'd still jump.

There's a lot of restraint in how the film sticks to its time period, feeling very much in mood and style like a 1970s film.

James said that to me very early on. It was the '70s without hitting people over the head — with bell bottoms or an episode of Partridge Family or something. Yeah, it's in the '70s and you've got '70s clothes, and you've got the odd "groovy" that the kids say — which they would — and I think it gives people a little frame of reference, but it's not blatant.

It's refreshing to see the older style of making scary movies is still effective.

No disrespect to horror movies from the past 15 years, but when people say, "What are the great horror movies?" you're always drawn to the Exorcist — that movie always comes up as one of maybe three or four that are arguably the best. Those are movies that are rich in character and not overly graphic. The violence is used appropriately, the blood is used appropriately. And I think James has a real affinity for that, which I always admired, especially coming from Saw. He almost started this whole movement, I feel like, with the shock and the gore and everything. But one of the things that struck me about (our previous collaboration) Insidious was the complete opposite of that. And now he's just really hit his stride.

What's in store at summer's hottest comic book geek-fest

Comic-Con. The annual event showcases the latest in film, TV and general geekery

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D. CONTRIBUTED

July means one thing for the entertainment industry: Comic-Con. Here's what we're geeking out over this year at the annual pop culture smorgasbord in San Diego.

IN FILM

Marvel: The comic book movie juggernaut never ceases to impress in San Diego, and hopefully this year will be no different. We're looking for updates on Avengers 2 as well as the upcoming Captain America and Thor sequels. Plus, wouldn't it be awesome if they brought out the whole cast of Guardians of the Galaxy, their bizarre new super-team movie?

X-Men: Days of Future Past: It feels like it's been forever since Fox has mounted a Hall H presentation for Comic-Con, but this year they're back. Mum is the word on what will be presented, but we have it on good authority something will be done to celebrate the impending release of the Wolverine. More importantly, we're hoping for an update from Bryan Singer on his return to the X-Men franchise.

Godzilla: With Pacific Rim putting giant, city-destroying monsters back in people's minds, the time is right to re-introduce the original kaiju, Godzilla. The reboot, starring Aaron Taylor-Johnson, Ken Watanabe and Elizabeth Olsen, has just started filming, so hopefully there will be some monster-sized surprises in store.

IN TV

Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D.: We may have to wait until summer 2015 for Avengers 2, but Marvel is helping make that wait go faster with this TV spin-off, overseen by Joss Whedon himself. It's easily our most anticipated show of the fall season. And maybe we'll finally learn how Clark Gregg's Agent Coulson — who appeared to have perished in the Avengers — factors into the new show.

Doctor Who: We're halfway through the venerable British sci-fi series' 50th anniversary, so expect big things — especially with current Time Lord Matt Smith bowing out later this year. That makes this his last Comic-Con as Doctor Who, so hopefully he'll make the most of it.

Hannibal: Fans of this dark and twisted drama had to wait a torturously long time for NBC to give it a second season renewal — coming weeks after other series got the green light — so both fans and executive producer Brian Fuller have plenty of reason to celebrate at the show's first panel.

IN GENERAL GEEKERY

Nerd HQ: Chuck star Zachary Levi's Nerd Machine's, a party space devoted to all things nerdy, is back and moving to much bigger digs at Petco Park for a slew of dance parties, celebrity panels and gaming demos. Maybe next year they'll just take over the whole convention centre.

Wired Café: Wired magazine's Comic-Con oasis celebrates its fifth year of offering attendees a respite from the geeky madness with food, drink and gadgets galore. Though, given the level of treachery on the hit HBO series, maybe we'll skip the drinks at the Game of Thrones bar.

What about Star Wars?

Fans will have to wait

Hey, isn't the new Star Wars movie coming out soon? Wouldn't Comic-Con be the perfect place to do some unveiling? You would think, but every other year Disney — the new parent company in charge of all things Star Wars — has its own summer to-do, the D23 Expo, in August. With D23 looming, it's no surprise the studio will have no presence at Comic-Con aside from its Marvel panel presentation.

Choices. Summerlicious restaurants offer host of dishes for vegan and vegetarian diners

Being a vegan or vegetarian doesn't mean missing out on this year's Summerlicious Toronto event.

After all, many of the city's 196 restaurants participating in this annual two-week celebration are providing a number of vegetarian options on their $25 to $45 prixe fixe menus.

"Now it's also vegan dishes available on the menus, rather than just vegetarian," said Rachel Berman, business office manager for Marcel's Bistro & Lounge in the downtown core. "I think even five years ago you would have seen lots of vegetarian choices, but not vegan. That's a change where we leave out the dairy."

Of the 12 dishes available on Marcel's lunchtime Summerlicious menu, for example, seven are vegetarian options and four are also vegan. Not only that, the vegetarian and vegan options are changing.

"The options are becoming more creative and varied as well," said Eirine Papaioannou, event support supervisor, partnerships with the city of Toronto. "We're seeing items such as watermelon salad, roasted eggplant stuffed ravioli, chilled Ontario strawberry soup, kale salad, tempeh steak and quinoa with curried roasted cauliflower, to name a few."

Part of the interest in creating menus with plenty of vegan/vegetarian choice is accommodating a wide variety of diners.

"We try to keep pork off the menu as well because there are Muslim and Jewish diners who are a little more specific," said Matt Roulston, general manager of Little Anthony's Italian + Bar in the Financial District. That leaves room for the restaurant to feature its signature item, Spaghetti Pomodoro, made with spaghetti, tomato sauce, basil and Parmigiano.

"We're always trying to be conscious of providing an equal experience for everyone, rather than having someone who's a vegetarian come in and say, 'Oh, I can have this dish and only this dish.'"

That said, balancing a prixe fixe menu — which generally comes with only a few options — with vegetarian choices for diners can be difficult, said Paul Benallick, chef of Jump, which offers vegetarian choices such as an Andalusian-style white gazpacho and housemade vegetarian lasagna.

"With our Summerlicious clientele, I'd say less than one per cent are vegetarian," he said. "We have a large vegetarian regular clientele in the restaurant and we have two to three starters and one full vegan main course plus pastas and other options that are on our regular menu for vegetarians. But when you shorten it down to four choices for prixe fixe, it's challenging."

Trending

Here are some trends that can be found in participating Summerlicious restaurants around Toronto.

- LOCAL, LOCAL, LOCAL: With the popularity of 100-mile eating and the farm-to-table concept, this dining choice is here to stay for Summerlicious as well. "Our chef goes to the market at least once a week, if not more, and sees what the local fresh produce is," says Rachel Berman, the business office manager for Marcel's Bistro & Lounge. That day's menu depends on what is bought.
- CATCH OF THE DAY: Fish is finding a comfortable place on Summerlicious menus. "We're also seeing many more fish options and variety of fish on the Summerlicious menus, such as OceanWise pan-seared Lake Erie white perch, pickerel, Arctic char, halibut, mackerel and trout," says Eirine Papaioannou, event support supervisor, partnerships with the city of Toronto.
- ORGANIC PLEASE: "A lot of food trends are vegan and organic so we incorporate that by using suppliers who give us organic foods that are fresh," says Louise Choi, owner of Hotel Ocho. "So we have items such as our sweet potato soup made of organic potatoes."
- GLUTEN-FREE: The push for gluten-free choices on today's menus continues. "Gluten-free is popular and we've designed our menu with that in mind because a large number of our guests want to eat in that manner," says Matt Roulston, general manager of Little Anthony's Italian + Bar.

Three tracks that should already be on your radar

Shark Attack (I Can See Them Circling)/The Mark Inside

Just as this Toronto band was about to release their new album, Dark Hearts Can Radiate White Light, singer and guitarist Chris Levoir passed away. The group is now giving away the entire record (which is very good) in his memory.

9/Föllakzoid

I've seen this Chilean band's music described as "alternative cosmic trance." It sounds more like Krautrock to me, but whatever. This track from the album entitled II is a brilliant driving song.

Delightfully F'd Up/Alex Silas

This singer/poet/MC/rapper from Ottawa makes a palatable smoothie out of indie rock, blues, electronic, folk and reggae.

Daft Punk. Electronica duo joins a long list of artists who have partnered with condom brands to extend their reach

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News

If you're about to get lucky, Daft Punk wants to make sure you're protected. That's why the French duo has partnered with condom maker Durex to make Get Lucky condoms, named after the first single off of their latest album Random Access Memories.

Here's other celebrities who have mixed business with pleasure.

Ke$ha

During the singer's Get Sleazy tour, Ke$ha encouraged her fans to have some fun but stay safe when she shot hundreds of Lifestyle condoms featuring a picture of her face out of a cannon at her concerts.

Don't get lucky without Get Lucky. HANDOUT

JLS

The X-Factor boy group partnered with Durex for a Just Love Safe campaign in order to encourage safe sex behaviour among their young fans. The four packages featured a different colour and picture of a JLS member.

Ludacris

While he didn't get his own condom, the rapper was the spokesperson for the Magnum Live Large Project, which honoured men with lyrical talent who used the extra-large sized condom.

Fans were encouraged to create Magnum-themed lyrics to a pre-recorded track, and the winner won $5,000, a chance to get their song played on national radio, a trip to an Atlanta hip-hop festival and the chance to be brought on stage during one of Ludacris' shows.

Lord of the Rings

We're pretty sure the LoTR-branded condoms aren't official. However, whoever owns the property rights to the series is probably kicking themselves for not putting that thou shalt not pass tagline on a rubber themselves.

Mos Def most definitely puts himself on the line with video

Guantanamo Bay. Human rights organization Reprieve started an initiative to raise awareness on force-feeding practices

Actor and rapper Yasiin Bey, better known as Mos Def, has tears in his eyes as he pleads for the men who are holding him down not to continue. The men make a move to reinsert a thin, plastic tube in his nostril, and he fights them despite being shackled. A man off camera finally yells for them to stop, and Bey breaks down.

The dramatic video, demonstrating how prisoners are force fed in Guantanamo Bay, lasts less than five minutes. In real life, the whole process lasts two hours and occurs twice a day, Cori Crider, human rights organization Reprieve's strategic director, explained.

"The point of the video is to humanize their plight," Crider told Metro World News.

Quote

"He's in sincere and pretty severe pain. He said he thought it was one of the more important things he had been involved in."

Cori Crider
Human rights organization Reprieve's strategic director

Reprieve, along with BAFTA-award winning director Asif Kapadia (Senna), created the video to bring awareness to the violations that many of the more than 100 protesters who are hunger striking at the detention centre are going through. The U.S. government has acknowledged that 45 prisoners are being force fed to prevent starvation.

The group approached Bey and explained that they were looking for a person in the public eye to show the brutal process.

"He's in sincere and pretty severe pain," Crider said. "Your throat tenses up when you are nervous. ... He said he thought it was one of the more important things he had been involved in."

Crider, who is an attorney who has represented dozens of prisoners in the centre over the years, explained that the hunger strike started in February over many issues culminating in the burning of Quran books. However, she felt it had been long forgotten by the media.

No response

Reprieve hasn't received a response from the Obama administration.

- Quote. "I hope they treat it like an emergency situation soon because God knows what will happen," Crider stated.
- Watch. youtube.com/watch?v=4hQ5xz_5to4

What she and her team at Reprieve want is simple.

They want the U.S. government to stop the force feeding of prisoners during the daylight hours of Ramadan, which began on July 10.

They want medical professionals to stop administering Reglan, a medication prescribed for anti-vomiting and nausea in the U.S. that comes with a warning not to take it longer than 12 weeks.

They want prisoners to have the right to choose whether they want to protest and hunger strike, and not to be forced against their will to receive nutrients.

"I don't see any end in sight," she said.

Crider hopes that with the massive attention the video is getting, people will become passionate about the issue and join the fight.

At the very least, she hopes the U.S. government will understand that force feeding is not acceptable, and that they will transfer people who have been cleared by U.S. national security as not being terrorist threats. METRO

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

Halle Berry ALL IMAGES GETTY

Low key wedding bells imminent for Berry

Halle Berry will reportedly marry her fiancé, Olivier Martinez, this weekend, according to E! News, though the location of the event is still a mystery. Berry and Martinez were spotted flying out of LAX earlier this week with Berry's daughter, Nahla, in tow. If Berry's interview with InStyle last year is any indication, it will be an intimate ceremony. "I do know it will be very small," she told the magazine. The couple, who have been engaged since March 2012, are expecting their first child together.

LeAnn Rimes

LeAnn laughing her ass off at pregnancy rumours

Country singer LeAnn Rimes finds Star magazine's claims that she's expecting a baby with husband Eddie Cibrian hilarious. "(Laughing my ass off,) Star magazine," she tweeted in response to the story. "I don't know if you (doctor) the pics or pick the worst one you can find, but I'm far from pregnant and just dropped a jean size."

The Word

King of Queens star leaves Church of Scientology

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News in New York City

King of Queens and The Talk star Leah Remini has left the Church of Scientology. Apparently Remini, who has been a member of the church for many years, grew tired of the organization's habit of cutting off ties with people it deems "suppressive."

"It all began when Leah questioned the validity of excommunication of people," a source told the Post. "She is stepping back from a regime she thinks is corrupt. She thinks no religion should tear apart a family or abuse someone under the umbrella of 'religion.'" Apparently, at Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes's wedding, the actress asked politely where church leader David Miscavige's wife was. It must have been a loaded question, because Remini was slammed with years of auditing and "thought modification." Remini is reportedly considering going public, but wants to wait and see what the church is going to do, since they're rumoured to harass those who try to leave.

Remini can stay at my place if she needs to hide out. I am a strong supporter of religious freedom for sitcom stars.

Angelina Jolie

War, what is it good for? An Angelina Jolie movie, apparently

Angelina Jolie has her second project as a director all lined up. The actress and activist will be taking on Unbroken, a Second World War drama about former prisoner of war Louie Zamperini, according to Yahoo News. "I've had the privilege of spending a great deal of time with Louie Zamperini, who is a hero of mine, and now — I am proud to say — a dear friend," Jolie says in a statement. "I am deeply honoured to be telling his extraordinary story, and I will do my absolute best to give him the film he deserves." Oscar-winners Joel and Ethan Coen are writing the script, and Jolie was spotted in Hawaii this week scouting locations. Jolie's first film as a director, In the Land of Blood and Honey, was released in 2011.

A crispy nacho is a happy (tasty) nacho

Corn and Steak Grilled Nachos. When they're nuked in the microwave, these little guys die a soggy death. Save a nacho from this sad ending with your barbecue

Before turning on the grill, make sure the baking sheet you plan to use fits on it with the lid down. If it doesn't, you can divide the ingredients into multiple smaller pans. The smaller pans also can be cooked in batches, if needed.

Ingredients

- 3 tbsp adobo sauce (from a can of chipotle chilies in adobo)
- 3 tbsp tomato paste
- 3 tbsp canola, plus extra
- 1 tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp kosher salt
- 9 oz beef sirloin, thinly sliced (can substitute pre-sliced "stir-fry" beef)
- 1 ear corn, husked
- 11-oz bag corn tortilla chips
- 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
- 1/2 pint cherry tomatoes, cut into quarters
- 1/3 cup pepperoncini, stemmed and thinly sliced
- 1/2 small red onion, diced

1. In a medium bowl, whisk together the adobo sauce, tomato paste, oil, garlic powder and salt. Add the steak and mix to coat thoroughly. Cover and refrigerate for at least 20 minutes and up to overnight.

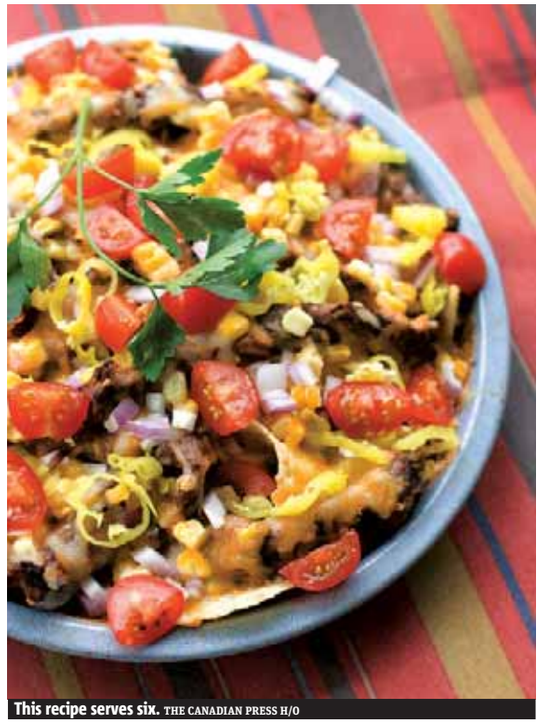
2. When ready to cook, heat the grill to medium-high.

3. Rub the corn with a bit of canola oil, then set it on the grill. Cook the corn, turning often, until lightly browned on all sides, about 2 to 3 minutes. Transfer the corn to a plate and set aside until cool enough to handle.

4. Meanwhile, use an oil-soaked paper towel held with tongs to coat the grill grates with oil. Add the steak and grill for 1 to 2 minutes per side, or to desired doneness. Transfer to a plate and set aside. Leave the grill on, but reduce the heat to low.

5. Arrange the tortilla chips in an even layer on a rimmed baking sheet. Spread the steak evenly over the chips.

6. Cut the corn kernels from the cobs. To do this, stand the ear on its wide end, then use a knife to saw down the length of the sides. Scatter the corn kernels over the steak and chips, then scatter the cheese over that. Set the baking sheet on the grill, cover the grill and cook for 7 to 10 minutes, or until the cheese is melted.



This recipe serves six. THE CANADIAN PRESS H/O

7. Remove the baking sheet from the grill, then scatter the tomatoes, pepperoncini and diced onion over the other toppings. Serve immediately.

Staple of summertime

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy

Innovative wine lovers have been adding extras to vino for centuries, creating inspired alternatives to drinking it neat.

The Spanish came up with the idea of sangria: A blend of red wine, liqueur and fruit named after their term for blood because of its dark colour. Arguably the first wine cooler, Canadians are just cluing in to how easy it is to make — not to mention how well it goes with summer menus.

My recipe is meant to be played with, so experiment. Use whatever fruit turns you on hand and a Spanish red or a value-priced, fruit-forward alternative like Lindeman's juicy 2012 Cawarra Shiraz Cabernet ($8.95 to $10.99) from Australia.

Peter's Simple Sangria:

- Ice cubes
- 750 ml chilled red wine
- 100 ml orange liqueur
- 500 ml gingerale
- 200 ml lemonade
- Fruit
- Sugar

Grab a clear glass pitcher and toss ice cubes. Add all the liquids, then fruit. Stir. Give it a sip and add sugar to taste. PRICES REFLECT RANGE ACROSS COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Just opened: Bero

Chef Matt Kantor has some new digs, and these ones are bringing some amazing eats to the already burgeoning Leslieville scene. Continuing the wave of Spanish-inspired restaurants in the city, Bero's cuisine is refined and fancy while still maintaining an approachable ethos. Find it at 889 Queen St. E.

Just opened: Playa Cabana Hacienda

The third instalment of the Playa Cabana enterprise opens today at 14 Dupont St. Only steps away from the first location (at 111 Dupont St.), Hacienda is a bit more eclectic in decor than its predecessors, but will be slinging similar cool cocktails and serving up similar Mexican cuisine we've come to love from the restaurateurs that can do no wrong.

Just opened: EFS

King West's hottest new patio wants to sell you something... everything, actually. EFS (Everything's For Sale) just opened up at 647 King St. W., bringing another cabana style spot for summertime chilling. From the same peeps as Bloke & 4th, EFS has cheap drinks on the daily, some killer digs, and droves of King West's beautiful people.

Just opened: Das Gasthaus

We've finally some new and unique cuisines starting to pop up around the city. Case in point: the newly opened Das Gasthaus at 107 Danforth Ave. Serving up contemporary German cuisine (think: German cured meats, sausages, schnitzel and the like), Das Gasthaus gets props for bringing something new and exciting to a city often quick to stay on-trend instead of off.

Muzik Bier Garden

At Muzik Nightclub (15 Saskatchewan Road, Exhibition Place) you'll now find one of the hottest scenes of the summer, and that's not just because it's outside. Muzik Bier Garden launched recently, bringing an outdoor natural stone patio with hand-crafted wood tables, menus featuring a variety of beer selections, and food pairings to satisfy any palate.

Just opened: Cibo Wine Bar

We've a grand new wine bar on King West from Liberty Entertainment Group, and it might very well be your new favourite hotspot. Cibo Wine Bar replaces the space left in the wake of the ill-fated Alimento (522 King St. W.), and is bringing an Italian social dining experience to the club-heavy King West area.

Ohio tough on Blue Jays, Dickey

R.A. Dickey's knuckleball can be puzzling. Same for the Blue Jays.

Toronto was held to two hits by Danny Salazar — making his MLB debut — and the Jays lost 4-2 to the Indians on Wednesday in Cleveland.

After winning 11 straight, the Jays have gone 6-11 and remain stuck in last place in the AL East.

Dickey (8-10) lost command in the sixth with the game tied 1-1, when he hit a batter, walked two and gave up an RBI single to Lonnie Chisenhall. A year ago at the all-star break, Dickey was 12-1 and on his way to an NL Cy Young Award.

"The last four or five weeks I've really felt good," Dickey said. "I've had one rough start in there, but other than that I've really been good as far as the way I've felt. I anticipate a pretty strong (second) half."

Clark provides rough outline for Clarkson

NHL. Upon arrival in T.O., new Leaf already being compared to beloved former captain

Recently signed Maple Leafs forward David Clarkson and former Toronto captain Wendel Clark lend a hand at the Toronto Maple Leafs Hockey School on Thursday. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

As David Clarkson spent his first day on Toronto ice alongside his idol Wendel Clark, the comparisons between the Maple Leafs' newest winger and their past star had already started.

Clarkson hopes his tenure in Toronto earns him that kind of stature, but Clark already sees the 29-year-old as a better player.

"I haven't got that talent," Clark said Thursday after he and Clarkson worked with kids at the team's hockey school.

"He brings all parts of the game. It's not a one-dimensional game. Whatever game you want to play, that's how he'll play it. If it's going to be a physical night, he's there. If it's part of putting the puck in the net, he's there."

Clarkson, who signed a seven-year, $36.75-million US deal with the Leafs last week, has plenty of work to do to live up to that contract. That includes scoring and being the kind of grinding, physical force he was with the New Jersey Devils.

But Clark, who knows a thing or two about pressure after being the top pick in the 1985 draft, thinks it's unfair to count on everything from Clarkson, who has just one 30-goal season.

"Dave will come out and play his style, especially at home," Clark said. "I think his style suits that coming in here because this isn't really a road building for a lot of teams with 10 hometown boys usually on every other team. It's good.... it's going to be a long night when you're playing against him."

Clark had a similar impact during parts of 12 seasons with the Leafs as he battled injuries and tried to balance physicality and offence. Growing up in the Toronto area, Clarkson has a couple of specific memories about his idol.

"I think it had to do with either going down the wing with a big shot and scoring, or a fight," he said. "I love that style of play or sticking up for a teammate. Those are the kinds of things that I enjoyed watching when I was young."

So it's no surprise that Clarkson, when he grew into his six-foot-one, 200-pound frame, tried to do the same at the NHL level. Clark didn't even mind the "Wendel Clark-son" nickname.

"It's all good," Clark said. "Any time you can bring energy to the team, it's not just about scoring and everything. It takes all types of players, so when you can bring different personalities in and lead-by-example guys and bring energy to the building, that's the fun part."

Kovalchuk walks away from deal with the Devils

Ilya Kovalchuk considered staying in Russia when the NHL lockout ended in January. Ultimately he returned to play with the New Jersey Devils.

But on Thursday, Kovalchuk made official what the Devils knew was a possibility since then.

The Devils announced that Kovalchuk is returning home and retiring from the NHL. The final 12 years and $77 million US of his contract were voided, and Kovalchuk is free to play in Russia's KHL.

"Though I decided to return this past season, (general manager Lou Lamoriello) was aware of my desire to go back home and have my family there with me," the 30-year-old said in a statement. "The most difficult thing for me is to leave the New Jersey Devils, a great organization that I have a lot of respect for, and our fans that have been great to me."

It was a move that stunned the hockey world, but not Lamoriello, who insisted nothing in the game surprises him.

"This wasn't a decision by the New Jersey Devils," Lamoriello said on a conference call with reporters. "He will not be playing here at his desire."

Kovalchuk played for SKA St. Petersburg during the lockout and made it clear several months ago that he would stay there if he could.

Forlan questions becoming a pain for Toronto FC prez

There are no denials of interest, but Toronto FC continues to stay mum on the topic of Uruguayan World Cup star Diego Forlan.

"We don't really have a lot to say about it," Toronto president Kevin Payne said Thursday, citing Forlan being under contract to Brazil's Internacional.

Pressed further, Payne acknowledged his MLS club could make an offer for a player under contract. He just didn't want to talk about such.

On Wednesday, manager Ryan Nelsen suggested that the foundation of the team needed to be sorted before it would make sense bringing in such a marquee name.

Payne agreed. But he said the team has the beginnings of "a very good foundation." And he suggested that there are times when you just have to take the bull by the horns.

"Sometimes opportunities come along, you can't always time everything exactly the way you'd like," he said. "So there are times when certain situations arise that you have to try to take advantage of. And it may not fit perfectly into your timetable."

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You are not usually the trusting sort but you seem determined to see only the best in people today. Good for you but don't believe everyone.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
You have so much work to finish before the weekend that you may be at a loss to know how to get it all done. Don't worry, the planets will provide. All you have to do is make a start and then keep going.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Wherever you go and whatever you do today people will greet you like a long lost friend. You must be doing something right to get this kind of response, so carry on.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
It seems you have been rather obsessive about someone. For some reason you have been thinking about this person night and day. Is that healthy? Probably not. Think about something else.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Friends will rally around and make life easy for you today. What have you done to deserve this kind of assistance? Probably nothing much but you do have a knack for attracting people.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
It might be wise to leave your credit card at home today because if you use it once you won't know when to stop. Use cash only and limit yourself to a certain amount. If you haven't got enough, too bad.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
People you do business with today may not be talkative but from the look in their eyes and the way they position themselves, you will know what they are thinking. You read body language so well.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
It's good to be open-minded but that does not mean you can allow people with silly theories to waste your time. The Sun in Cancer promotes broader thinking but some thinking is too outrageous to take seriously.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
No matter how vulnerable you may feel at the moment, you need to be around people because it is only through personal contact that you can rise above this negative phase.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Make a point of being calm today because what happens over the weekend will try your patience to the limit.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You are desperate to be on the move and will be impatient with people who think or act too slowly. Your journey will be a lot more pleasant if you relax and stop looking at your watch so often. Time doesn't matter.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you are confused about something, you must speak up. There is nothing wrong in admitting that you don't "get" it and it's unlikely you are the only one. You will be doing people a favour. SALLY BROMPTON
